Newsletter

Week beginning November 27th

Dear families,

Happy December 1st! The children are very excited about presents and elves. Could we ask, respectfully, that we keep the excitement in check by not sending your child into school with festive jumpers or head wear yet!

Behaviour in school:

We have high expectations of your child(ren)s behaviour in school. We expect them to come in appropriately dressed in uniform and weather appropriate clothing. They need to enter school in the morning on time and ready to learn. Water only in bottles (unless a specific medical condition has approved juice). If a child refuses to complete work during lesson times, they are expected to catch up at break/lunch. If work still is not completed, we will send it home and expect you to support that learning and expectation at home.

We have been very clear with all children that we do not tolerate any 'rough stuff'. This includes play fighting. Please reiterate this message at home too.

Bumped heads:

We no longer send home slips of paper, but will text you if your child bumps their head but we are not overly concerned. You will need to keep an eye on your child for signs of concussion. If we are concerned about your child, we will phone you immediately. If you do receive a text, please do not panic. It is not uncommon for children to bump heads! If we were worried, we would call you.

We look forward to welcoming you to our Christmas events!

From the PTA (FONES) at North Elmham.

Thank you to all at North Elmham who supported our book fair. Thank you especially to the FONES for organising.

We are pleased to report that the book fair held at school has provided the school with 41 new books totalling £213.66! (RRP £240)

FONES purchased a few of these to top up the sales and generate a much higher level of commission, but we had amazing support from the parents and children.
